On the same day that violence erupted in Marsa Matrouh, the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF) released a report denouncing Egypt's legal system for not bringing people to justice for violent acts against Christians and their property.

According to the report, in the last year there have been more than a dozen incidents in which Coptic Christians have been targets of violence.

"This upsurge in violence and the failure to prosecute those responsible fosters a growing climate of impunity," USCIRF Chairman Leonard Leo states in the report.
